Paul: I'd like to question you a little bit about your talk "Power and Negotiating from the Bottom Up." You were talking about people's need for power. That's common, that is a very human need. That's why people throw a tantrum about who gets what at the dinner table. Who gets to sit at the head of the table? Who gets to eat first? Who gets to take another bite? Do you find that when people have that need they make it very complicated, they get confused? They don't ask themselves, "Why do I want this? What am I doing?" What would happen if they faced this need not as a quest for power, but as a need for companionship? Jesus: It's very common. I meet people all the time who want power and they want to be in charge. They want to be in charge of everybody, and they're afraid that everybody else is in charge of them. Their need for power has caused a great deal of confusion. Many people are confused by their need for power, and even more confused by the fact that if people understood the need for companionship then they would use that very need to serve the whole human race and not serve themselves. People want to serve, but at the same time they want to be in charge. If people understood this, then there'd be no more wars or murders or anything like that. At the same time, people don't realize that if they shared their power with others, then all their power could be utterly superfluous. So they actually take the opposite approach, and they think in terms of ruling and being a dictator. But there's nothing so powerful as to share one's power with others and see that others can do much more than one can do. The Need for Power in Politics Paul: Finally, I want to talk about politics. When you think about political people, you think of people who think that they want power to do more than they do. You think about people who want to get to the top, who don't want to serve. You think of power. What would a good political person look like? Jesus: A good political person would be a person who wants to serve, who would rather serve than just want power. A good political person would want to serve the whole of humanity, rather than just rule over it, or lead it, or push people around and get to be in charge. Powerful People

Whole-genome sequencing of an HIV-1-infected patient: comparison of HIV-1 genotyping methods with analysis of HIV-1 quasispecies. Diversity of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) quasispecies has become increasingly recognized in recent years. Whole-genome sequencing is useful for detection and analysis of minor variants in HIV infection. We performed full-length sequencing of env, pol, and gag of HIV-1 from an HIV-1-infected patient who had recently acquired HIV infection, and whole-genome HIV-1 quasispecies were analyzed and compared. We also analyzed HIV-1 population diversity by direct sequencing of the HIV-1 genome from plasma viremia. For both amplification methods, it was possible to detect the majority of the minor variants in the patient's virus. However, both approaches could not completely explain the underlying mechanisms causing such a low variability of the patient's virus. As a result, we were unable to quantify minor variants in the patient's virus population by either method. However, HIV-1 quasispecies that were determined using full-length sequencing were comprised of less than 10% of the patient's circulating plasma virus. These results clearly show that minor HIV-1 variants can be present in an HIV-1-infected patient, and these variants are at a very low frequency in the patient's plasma virus population.Pages This is the place where I share my interests, and some of the things that I make. It has slowly evolved from the place where I share quilting, sewing and knitting projects. Someday it will be a showcase of all of my crafting. Right now it is more of a mess! Tuesday, July 12, 2010 Over the Moon I am at the house of a friend that just had a baby. They had spent the morning in the hospital at the birthing center, and I was able to come over and meet the little boy, and'see' his mama. I entered the room and the baby was awake, staring up at me. I said, "Hi, I'm your mom and I'd love for you to take a look at my new purse, and to try it on." (I was in no hurry). The baby was not pacified, but he was curious about what was going on. So I patted the top of his belly and said, "You know, it's
