What's new:

Emissaries of Nergal Although lost in the vast eternity of time and space, Nergal has left us reminders of his work to bring his Order to life. Throughout history countless emissaries of the Demon King have occupied different planes, bringing the Demon Order to life across the Old World and recruiting the sword-maddened to abide by his Code and bloodline. Within the Great Betrayal After the destruction of the Ancient demonic empire of Al-Ely, the Nine demonic legions fled to the new world to move into the folds of civilisation. Grittier in armour and with longer reach, the warriors were tasked to protect and build civilization. These Fused Legions kept covenant with their king - Nergal and were given ndasa (blood-brotherhood) with him through their leaders. They remained ever loyal and responsible while their king was gone, clinging to their mission; guard this new world and keep safe the Edomite not-cursed and all other nature's creatures. Nergal took a liking in those savagery did not bend to his will. He took being worshipped as a God as a challenge, and after centuries of wars conquered and subjugated many nations, shaping them like a sculptor, carving them to his will, wielding total dominion over everything with a wave of his hand, becoming a true ruler, but unlike other emperors he did not claim any throne or rule from his seat of convenience. He had told his chieftains of his plans for their new home: the two regions known as the Iron Lands, one to the North, where not a breath of air is found nor a man can set foot, the second being the lush land of the Indian Ocean, unoccupied by civilisation. His aim was to leave that territory ungoverned, where savage hunters roamed the lands, free to roam and forge themselves or go as they wished. His dreams of a massive civilised nation where nature and chaos could exist side by side; his chosen rulers to carry his will and mould them as he wished. In this time of great potential, the origins of the edomite race dwelled side by side with the legendary "Dragon Kings", whose empire had been destroyed during

New to the Battleship game family, Play the Tide is a simple, fast-paced digital board game of counterplay where players split into two teams. Each team has three spots, with the goal of sinking the opposing team's ships. Each turn, you choose to play, and two opposing players must play in one spot. Battleships have a history, and players of the game have the option to play your historical battles or fights from World War 2, including the famous Battle of the River Plate. Board Game Details: 2 or 4 players 1 or 2 minute rounds 10% chance of a Player Collapse Historical Battleship Battles 2 or 4 player selection Play against historical Battleships, and friends. Battle: Allied ships vs German cruisers Relive the Battle of the River Plate and the Battle of the Atlantic. Movement: Each player controls a fleet of 2-4 aircraft, and can move their ships using movement cards. Attack: On each turn players place a move card in one of their spots on the board. Penalty: If your ships miss, you are penalized a movement card. Historical Events: During the game you can select historical events, or battles. Visuals: Beautifully rendered naval battles in the form of stock photography, original art, and map art! Terrible fun game, a shame it's closed. I really enjoyed it but it seems to have been rushed out. They are also going to be phasing it out. the developer is already working on the next game, but that may not be for a few months. In a similar vein, I look forward to their future games and would be interested in more titles, but it seems as though it is probably just a matter of time before the developer stops completely and moves on to the next game. They didn't feel like they had any focus or direction with this game and it wasn't like they did the same thing a handful of times, it was like their hand is forced for the rest of their games! I was a little disappointed that the game was closed, but this is pretty much why I didn't end up spending any money on it. I used it a few times for some quick play with a friend, and was satisfied with what I got for my money, but that's all I needed really. The developers' history is that they don't do

British physicists have discovered a new way of transporting the internet across the UK by means of a “phone box size” fibre optic loop that hooks up the 16 million phone lines of the British phone system to carry data and across our roads. This new technology means that many underserved areas, like the all-important but densely populated center of London, could be connected to the internet for far less money. And there is even more good news: it could actually mean that mobile connections can no longer be said to
