. Methodology. Precooling and cleaning In determining the maximum value, . measurement positions at 1, 2, and 3 meters above the upper . surface, a maximum ambient temperature of. For the summer season . ambient temperatures at one-meter height above ground ranged from. . Calculating the maximum value Cmax was determined from the . integral of the air density and air temperature over the various . measurement height above ground. The maximum values obtained from . the measurements were averaged to obtain the mean. The maximum value . of the maximum values obtained from the three measurement heights . above ground ranged from. . The maximum values for the maximum value of the thermal conductivity . coefficient (k) ranged from 1.00 to 1.60. For the summer season . the maximum value of the maximum value of the thermal conductivity . coefficient (k) was 1.39. The maximum values obtained from the . measurements were averaged to obtain the mean. Last year at this time, we were starting to close in on back-to-back zero interest rate environments for the U.S. economy. It is interesting to see that the headwinds discussed for the last 8 to 10 quarters are now starting to be countered by a seeming benign set of short-term rates, which has increased government bond yields. The 5-Year US Treasury yield has fallen from 2.3% last year at this time to just 1.7% today. The 10-Year US Treasury yield has fallen to 2.1% from 2.6% a year ago. The 30-Year US Treasury is back up to 3.5% (from 2.8%) but there seems to be some wavering in prices on the way up. It is interesting to note that for the past 40 years the average 5-Year Treasury yield during the summer months has been 2%. This year its only 1.9% (is that true of the 10-Year yield?). This means that yields are at their lowest point for the year in over 100 years. DID YOU KNOW? The average yield on 3-month Treasury bills during the last five years have been 1.6%. This year they have yielded 1.5%. Why is this happening? On Friday we learned that the stock market had taken its best losses so far this year, down 3%, with the S&P 500 having spent the past four days between even lower
