The new fantasy action RPG series created by FlyingG Sinri/Vine, elden ring. In the world of Elden Ring, Tarnished Lands were once ruled by the Elden Lords. However, there are people who have become immortal as a result of the curse of the Elden Rings given to them by the evil Elder, god of the world of Tarnished Lands. The Tarnished Lands are at the edge of the world of Elden Ring, and many many stories about the Tarnished Lands are passed on from generation to generation. In the story of Elden Ring, the world of the Tarnished Lands does not belong to one of the existing three factions: Shirogane who protects light, Neptune who protects darkness, and Tolfalas who protects the land, but is instead a world where all three of the existing factions are struggling for power. In this world, it is a constant struggle between the three factions for the support of the people, and each faction continues to strengthen its power to exploit the people. The only place where the true will of the people is heard is the land of Coreana, the location of the lands between. Based on the world of Elden Ring, the Elden Lord, Antares, who is sent from the lands between to the Tarnished Lands, is a character who belongs to the world of the Tarnished Lands and is a new protagonist. The savages, and the barbarians who stand in open rebellion alongside them, live amidst this world. The land, which is painted upon by the impending war, is a land on the verge of collapse and chaos. A fantasy action RPG born from a myth. Actually, the story of 'the land on the verge of collapse' is a myth of utmost magnificence, where untold fear and despair live with the races that once lived in the life of this land, continue to stand their ground now, and struggle for their own

I don't know why I am so obsessed with this song, but I like how I can hear a small amount of the backing track that the original song is built on. I like that I can hear enough of the track that's backing the chorus in order to decide whether or not I want to leave the chorus line as is. Often, such changes are made for a good reason, such as, "Do you prefer the song this way or that way?" or "Are we still in the mood for this song?" etc, but it seems like there are times when it's simply meant to show off artistic creativity. The key issue, though, is that in a digital environment, a backing track can be recorded once and then expanded on. It's not going to be the same mix as the song you are listening to now. Is that what you are finding? Thank you for the detailed response. This is all very interesting to me. I'm still not sure that I understand fully what you're saying, but I'll have to take this on a little more, and hopefully come back to it when I have a little more time. EDIT: Back. You do make a good point about always having to double the samples used, so that means the song's built on the samples are a little more compressed. I'm going to give it some more thought. Working on a fanzine full of songs at the moment, and these were the original samples used for the songs. I replaced the drums bff6bb2d33
