West Hollywood firefighters responded to a home at 13467 Larchmont Drive around 5:30 p.m. There, the first firetrucks arrived to find that heavy fire had engulfed the building. "The fire was moving towards the rear of the house," said Jonathan Cohen of the Los Angeles Fire Department. "We made our way through the house, tried to evacuate the residents, and it was somewhat successful. There was a family inside. They were able to leave before the fire reached that portion of the house." Beverly Hills police reported that a baby was in the home at the time and needed to be transported to hospital. Two adults and one child were evacuated from the home. They were being treated for smoke inhalation. Firefighters were able to immediately take hold of the blaze, but the remainder of the home is now fully engulfed. "At this point, we're considering this to be an electrical fire," said Cohen. The cause of the fire is currently under investigation.
