A single sheet of graphene is an allotrope of carbon that is stable in the sense that it doesn't exist in another form at the same temperature and pressure. Graphene is a banded  $sp^2$ -hybridised allotrope of carbon, as opposed to the allotrope diamond. Graphene is attracting much interest recently as a major new flat class of 2D carbon sheet with a wide range of potential applications due to its unusual physical properties. Above all, the discovery of its unique banded structure gives rise to many new physical, chemical, mechanical, and electronic properties.
