Hyperthermia induces apoptosis of cervical cancer cells and sensitization to chemo-radiotherapy. To investigate the effects of hyperthermia on cervical cancer cells and its ability to sensitize cervical cancer cells to chemo-radiotherapy. The effects of hyperthermia at 43 degrees C alone and in combination with a range of chemotherapeutic drugs (5-fluorouracil, mitomycin C and cisplatin) and radiotherapy (irradiation at 0-8 Gy) on viability and apoptosis of SiHa cells were investigated. Data were assessed using ANOVA. In vitro MTT assay showed a synergistic effect of hyperthermia and chemo-radiotherapy. Data of apoptosis and MTT assay further confirmed a synergistic effect of hyperthermia and chemo-radiotherapy. These results were further confirmed by DNA fragmentation assay. These results demonstrate that hyperthermia could play a role in the treatment of cervical cancer. Hydrothermal synthesis, crystal structure, XRD, IR, Raman, N₂ sorption and catalytic performance of ZrO₂-SiO₂-P(MTC-6) ternary catalysts. Two zirconia catalysts doped with SiO₂ and P(MTC-6) were synthesized with 1:1 molar ratios at different calcination temperatures using ammonium hydroxide solution. XRD, SEM, IR and Raman spectra confirmed the formation of the ternary systems in which the successful incorporation of SiO₂ and P(MTC-6) throughout the sol-gel matrix of ZrO₂. The catalytic performance of the system was studied using the desorption of water vapour from ethanol over the catalysts in the temperature range 100-250 degrees C

So, the answer is JIGSAW POKER first of all, we know that The diagram shown in the question has a finite number of buttons (8, one on the left of each row) and a finite number of switches (4). It's also the same shape as the common puzzle board that can be bought at a jigsaw sales store. So we can conclude that the game is based on a jigsaw board. Now, let's see what are the other clues: The title starts with ODE (Münchhausen (German)). This hint points us to some kind of logic puzzles. These problems have two basic types: In the first case, let's call it "solitaire puzzle", there is a place (represented with the letter G) where all the switches must be closed to reach an exit (represented with a zero). All the other places are considered to be terminal places. You don't know if any switches are open or closed, but you can deduce it by moving the switches. In the second case, let's call it "intersection puzzles", the place to go is reached only if at least one switch is open
