The first edition of the bookÂ .William Whitehead, 1st Earl of Londesborough William Whitehead, 1st Earl of Londesborough (1761 - 25 September 1829), known as Sir William Whitehead between 1793 and 1796, was a British peer and politician. Background Born Sir William Whitehead, he was the second surviving son of Sir William Whitehead, 1st Baronet, of Firbank, Yorkshire. His mother was Ann Foster. In his early years, he followed the business of his father, but then was educated privately. Career The year after his father's death, he changed his name by patent to Sir William Whitehead, 2nd Baronet, and was admitted to the Royal Society in 1793. In 1796, he succeeded his elder brother to the baronetcy. In 1803, he was returned to parliament for Saltash, a seat he held until 1806. He served as Lord Lieutenant of Surrey from 1814 to 1828 and as Lord of the Bedchamber to King George IV from 1828 to 1829. In 1793, he was created Baronet Whitehead, of Firbank in the County of York, and in 1806 he was further honoured when he was made Baron Londesborough, of Firbank in the County of York. On 15 October 1823, he was raised to the peerage as Baron Londesborough, of Firbank, in the County of York. Lord Londesborough died in 1829, aged 69, and was succeeded in the earldom and barony by his eldest son, the Hon. William Whitehead. Family Lord Londesborough married, firstly, in 1808, Lady Emilia Ann Foster, daughter of Charles Foster, 2nd Baron Decies, and they were the parents of ten children: William Whitehead, 2nd Earl of Londesborough (1809–1883) Lord Charles Foster Whitehead (1812–1866) Lady Charlotte Johnstone Whitehead (1814–1897) Lady Frances Ann Whitehead (1817–1895) Lady Edith Emilia Whitehead (1820–1890) Lord Ernest William Whitehead (1823–1897
