I tried to cross the street, but it was crowded, there were people everywhere. "Why didn't you try to run for it?" Mr. Baskin asked. I was still wearing the hat. "Everyone was staring at me!" I said. "You were a little hat," Mr. Baskin pointed out. I do not know why, but I was angry at Mr. Baskin, and I was angry at the other people. They just weren't helping matters, with their staring and their whisperings. "Go back to bed! I'll wake you up in the morning!" I thought. "I'll go back to bed," I agreed, trailing him back to the bed. He slipped in, turned over, and pulled his knees to his chest. I stood up, noticed that my hat was on the floor, and felt guilty. Without warning, I fell down in front of him and put my arms around his shoulders. He shuddered, which made me shudder a little, I thought. I buried my head against his chest. "I like when you do that," he said. "It's cold on the bed," I said. He smiled. "Would it be all right if we did that, for a little while?" I asked. "I like it when you smile," I confessed. He pulled me up so that we were face to face. "It's cold, but," he began, leaning toward me. I put my finger on his lips, and then my arms wound around his neck. We sat there for what seemed like hours. Time passed. He sighed and lay down, leaving me alone in the dark. I had a sudden, overwhelming urge to look in the mirror again. I was amazed at what I saw. I couldn't believe that I was there, that I wasn't dreaming, that I was a person and my name was Eleanor Austen. I rubbed my eyes, and patted my hair for its thinness. My head ached, and I had a terrible, awful

Destructoid is the game I was waiting my whole life for. There are so many games I've been wanting to make forever, but with so few resources, I would most likely either never get to do it, or my game would suck. My biggest dream was to make a game that would make you think, make you laugh, make you cry, make you feel something. This was always a game I wanted to make, but I always kept putting it off. No, I'm not going to make any excuses for why I've been so indecisive, and no I don't have any good excuses for why I haven't been doing anything. I've been procrastinating for years on my dream game. This was when I decided to stop being afraid of failing. All I needed was a kick in the ass to get started. So I bought myself the worst PC ever made, put it in my bedroom, and took one week off of my job to make a game. The result is Destructoid. Remember, if you are lost like I was, just follow this simple mantra. "What I was afraid of failing will kill my game".

..... - The creator I'm a 21 year old kid from Southeast Pennsylvania. My hobby is making games. I love working with games, creating games, and making games. I have no idea what I will end up doing when I'm older, but I know my hobby is something I want to do. I began making my first game by learning C++. Then I learned a little bit of assembly. I then slowly moved to C#, and after that I moved to javascript. After years and years of sitting on my butt, I finally got a job that would give me access to a computer. I worked on Destructoid until around 2011, and then I got a job at a video game company. I worked on Sony's Destiny until I was laid off in 2013. Then I decided to go back to college, which would end up proving to be beneficial since I ended up getting a degree in Game Programming. I then spent a few months working at Ubisoft before I decided to start my own company. My company was relatively successful, and I got some stuff accomplished. I made an awesome game called Golf Quest which I think is
