TweakNow EnergyPack is an innovative tool that allows you to identify and prioritize your energy-consuming applications. You have the ability to monitor energy consumption of your Windows computers, optimize the battery life of your mobile devices and get insights on your daily energy usage. This application enables you to perform these actions on all PCs, laptops and mobile devices running Windows without the need for additional software. In addition, you can remotely control your computer's power using remote desktop, network connections, an online "remote from anywhere" account or your mobile device. On top of that, you have an energy-efficient "windows defender", the ability to set up flexible power plans and the ability to schedule power saver options. Moreover, this tool will show you some of the energy-saving tips provided by the US Department of Energy. The software has a straightforward and intuitive user interface with options that may be hidden, and a help file. It doesn't freeze or crash during our tests and its overall response time is quite good. You can remotely control your computer, setup flexible power plans and manage power saver options through an online account or a smartphone. The "windows defender" disables some features of your system, which include flashing the screen, displaying advertisements or pop-ups from other programs. TweakNow EnergyPack can work with Windows XP or 7 and is compatible with most mobile devices running on iOS 6.x and Windows Phone 8.x. TweakNow EnergyPack is a very good tool.
