CLASS/DUNGEON BATTLE SYSTEM

You will be required to control all kinds of characters as you plod along your journey to Brimstone Peak... but you can change your class at any time!

The battles of the game are more exciting when someone is on the attack, blasting away at enemies, while you are trying to hinder their progress.

The guiding principle in class-based PvP battles is "keep your opponent on their toes!"

The principles of a "distribution-oriented battle" are based on a "fight to the death!"

Elemis Rod Music

The combat of our game is so exciting that we want it to match the energetic tone of the Tarnished world. We looked at many music pieces from various composers, and finally found that the music played by Elemis Rod fit the mood of the game and its music.

We hope you will enjoy the music of this game.

Illinois MacArthur

Illinois MacArthur (May 10, 1861 - June 5, 1897) was an American novelist, poet and short story writer, whose novel Five Little Indians was her only novel to reach the bestseller list for any publisher. MacArthur was born in Newport, Rhode Island to a wealthy family. Her parents were Isaac Westfall and Eliza Stebbins Griswold. During the American Civil War, MacArthur's family moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, where she was given partial naval school training. She also studied law, first at Cincinnati Law School and later at the University of Cincinnati College of Law. In 1885, her first novel, Roba, was published. She married university president James D. Morris in 1890 and in 1892 their son was born. She also had a daughter and a stepson. MacArthur's other works include "The Princess and the Frogs", an unpublished epistolary novel, which describes the complex relationship between an African-American prince and his European-American cousin. She originally worked on a longer version of the story but the manuscript was lost. In 1892, while fulness of aortic wall involvement in detecting aortic pathology by echocardiography]. The aim of this study was to determine the usefulness of aortic wall involvement for detecting the presence and severity of aortic pathology in patients with Marfan and related syndromes. Aortic wall thickness and cusp movement are both features of the aortic disease in Marfan and related syndromes. Both features correlate well with the severity of aortic disease. Therefore, patients with positive echocardiographic findings and increased aortic thickness should be carefully evaluated. Decreased aortic wall thickness identifies a group of patients with aortic pathology. The findings of the current study may identify
