Mario's third VR-sim based game, Last Chickenburg: The Good: - While it's playable on the Vive in a home like environment, it's playable on the Oculus Rift DK2 or Gear VR on a smartphone with room-scale tracking. - Innovative use of that limited space. There is only one objective: dodge those pushy, pestering chickens. -

Got to love the sound design. - What impressed me initially is how many different levels there are to figure out. You can't just do one mission in the game. - Not overly frustrating. - Great visual design. - You can have chickens on your brain. - Great sense of scale. The Bad: - Familiar. Anyone who's played a VR platformer before will feel right at home. - You can't take out the chicken. Got to watch the chicken until it gets up. - The chicken are relentless. - You only have a limited capacity. - You feel really vulnerable at the end. - Some of the levels are out there. I'm not sure how to describe it, but just look at the video. Check out the trailer: The Verdict: The review is a little biased. I'm still getting used to VR. I'm not going to pretend I'm an expert, but as for me and my first impression, it's a great game to show people that are new to VR, how immersive this type of game can be. You can make the chicken more aggressive or just slower. You can focus on that scale or not. Maybe make a more coherent game for it. In the end, it's an escape from real life that's as satisfying as it's going to get. Maybe I'll go back. And perhaps I shouldn't have said such good things about VR right off the bat. You might want to skip this review. But if you like adventure games, and especially VR adventure games, this is a great game to check out. Pros: + Innovative use of that limited space. + Got to love the sound design. + What impressed me initially is how many different levels there are to figure out. + Not overly

Km2 game is a "road racing" game for Android, iPhone, iPad and iPod Touch. In "Km2" the race is on the roads, the places where kilometers matter the most. Main Platforms: Windows Developer: Boss Music Games Product description Hello everyone! My name is Yusima, a former Japanese detective. Being a detective in Japan is relatively easy. There is no exam and there are no strict trials you must go through. There is no strict approval process also. Detectives are very much like ordinary people. They don't have any special authority for investigations per say. So for example, when a detective ask someone about something or they ask for a survey or when they are on a stakeout, they may be mistaken as a stalker or suspicious person. This means they might be reported to the police. Since this is the case, Japanese detectives should be quick on their feet and should be able to lie and make good excuses on the spot. I was originally a good person who was very bad at lying, but during my detective work over the past 10 years, I had become a good liar and deceiver. This is a detective adventure game made by someone who is good at deceiving people. I hope you are challenged by this game! The price is also very cheap, it is very affordable for even small children. However the target audience is Adults. About This Content

What's new in Dread X Collection:

The Scarlet Deer Inn, also known as the Le Relais de la Cour D'Angleterre, was the first inn the ruling family of the Kingdom of Georgia (XVI) established in Europe. The inn was built as early as in the 11th century, in the small village of Marjukhi, the capital of Khevi district, Elis Abaduce, between Pochaev in Georgia and Nizhny Novgorod in Russia. It is located at the left bank of the river Oder. The inn belonged to the Georgian Bagratid Vardanid dynasty (1184-1213, 1220-1261), who had been invited in 1152 by the Lithuanian Piotr Vatas (an important prince of Samogitian origin). During the reign of the King Bagrat V (1224-1246), the inn became known as the "hostel of the kings" (razdor reis kavtorebi); thus, after the Georgian-Lithuanian union in 1237, the inn became the first official residence of the King of Georgia, and in 1255 - of his son and successor David IV. It was at Marjukhi that the "court of the kings" of Georgia held its first court meeting in the winter of 1188-1189. The court had been sent by Bagrat IV in the wake of the death of his first-born heir, Levan, with an intent to take over the throne himself and to prevent his twelfth-born son Demetrius I from being crowned. The meeting was attended by senior clergy, nobles from both sides of the frontier, as well as the future kings David V and his brother George III. From the Red Deer the Georgian kings led their troops along the Oder and at the Belaya River against the Knights Templar, who, under the command of King Andrew II of Hungary, had captured and secured Regensburg on the Oder. In 1322 the inn was a part of the peace treaty that ended the war between Hungary and Georgia. The Knights Templar founded their headquarters in the settlement of Belaya Rus on the banks of the Oder in Thuringia and were renamed "the Teutonic Order". From the inn to the Cathedral of the Holy Trinity of Marjukhi In 1237 Bagrat V, the heir apparent of King Demetrius I of Georgia, classical solid-phase peptide synthesis method. The results of UV and IR spectra confirmed the formation of RTNW.

Photochromism and quartz-crystal microbalance (QCM) were
