I'm making a game in JavaScript, and have made a ready made file that has all my data for the player's ship like speed etc. In a game I usually use JSON to store my variables in a text file that is easy to work with. So I wanted to do something similar and make an XML file instead, I have tried to use the following commands in the terminal: $ ganja export variables.xml $ ganja import variables.xml However, both seem to only work for one variable at a time. Is there any way to make a file that contains multiple variables? A: I don't know ganja, but it would help if the docs were more complete. I take it those docs are not available for download? So here's what I would do in any case, assuming (as the docs state) that your variables.xml looks like this: { "VehicleSpeed": 100, "VehicleAcceleration": 50, "VehicleYSpeed": 50, "WeaponAcceleration": 20, "WeaponFireRate": 3, "WeaponDamage": 10 } I'd create a function that takes as its argument the name of the the file you want to import (in this case variables.xml) and any number of dictionary values as arguments: import_dict(filename = 'variables.xml', var1 = 75, var2 = 30

January 30, 2006 Decision time for 'Cena; TNA boss knew he was dead all along Update: Kelly Green reports that Stephanie McMahon sent a message to Mark Henry after the show that he is no longer slated to appear at the TNA Genesis pay per view on January 31st. Green says Stephanie told Henry that the fact that CM Punk took the big swing saying he was dead and Henry won was unfortunate and that TNA has to get to work on booking the TNA/ROH feud they both had planned. Green reports that Vince McMahon was not at the press conference when Punk lost and that he was present when Henry "stood up" and challenged Punk. Green explains that Punk has not said anything to her about whether he will be appearing at TNA Genesis and that it seems he is going to "go with the flow" and appears to want to turn things back to the WWE and the feud. Prior to the press conference, Punk had talked on WWE's website about how it would be good for the WWE to lose at the TNA Genesis and that it would be good for the future of the company. Green also added that CM Punk has said to her that the loss to the Undertaker is his personal "throwing of the wrench" to the WWE and that it will take a while before he returns to the "fold". Henry, The Motor City Machine Guns and Christian Cage will meet at The Mansion in Detroit on February 19th in a three way match for the TNA X Division Title. The title has already been retained at Genesis and it could be a way to get the belt back in the hands of a top story character. 6d1f23a050
