Oasis Montaj 6.4.2 Registration Code.Q: Use of Else clause in ruby Please correct me if I am wrong. I learned that an else clause with a condition simply takes the last value unless a previous condition was true. For example: `if(v1 > v2) return v1 else if(v2 > v1) return v2 else return v1 end` This is like an `if...else...end` although it's not really a loop. I don't understand why this is used in ruby. In the above code, no matter what the value of v1, v2 will be returned, because `return v2` has to happen

last. Why not return v1 always.
Can someone please explain?
Thanks. A: return simply ends the execution of the method or the block that it is defined in, which happens to be the case in the question. if statement checks if the statement is true, and it returns the value specified in the if statement. If it's false, that's the end of the story. If any of the else blocks runs, it has to return a value. So, with return v1, you're telling that for any situation, you
