A: If you are looking for a solution to the large number of gibberish strings you get, I don't think you should try to keep track of the elements within the word. Why? Well, it works in a more straightforward way. I created a simple loop that goes through all of the strings, and if they are not gibberish, they are grouped in a word. You can use the following code to do this:

import re
def is_not_gibberish(s): """ Only returns true if it does not contain gibberish. If it contains gibberish, it returns false. """ gibberish_regex = re.compile('[^\w]+') return not gibberish_regex.search(s) def is_gibberish(s): """ Returns true if the string contains gibberish. """
gibberish_regex = re.compile('[^\w]+') return gibberish_regex.search(s) def all_gibberish(strings): """ Returns a list containing all gibberish strings. """ gibberish_strings = []
for string in strings:
    if is_gibberish(string):
        gibberish_strings.append(string)
return gibberish_strings
If you run all_gibberish(your_strings_list), you can see that it contains all gibberish strings. Then, you can create a new list with all the word/s you care about and then remove all of the gibberish elements. Here is an example:
raw_gibberish = all_gibberish(your_strings_list)
word_list = []
for i in range(0, len(raw_gibberish)):
    if is_not_gibberish(raw_gibberish[i]):
        word_list.append(raw_gibberish[i])
