Many famous cartoonists and cartoonist have drawn the cartoon first published in Chandoba (September, 1948), the comic book was called Tejasatya (lit.: Lightning ), and it was published in Gujarati, English and Marathi. Before that the comic first appeared in Buddy (January, 1948), the title was Budhiya (lit.: Brittle). In 1952, the Marathi and Malayalam editions were released as Chandoba and Ambili Ammavan respectively, followed by Gujarati in 1954, and English in 1955. The English version published in 1955 was called Comedy in Comics (seven volumes). The back cover of the English version had a quotation from F.O.Rderie that says, ♦One must be a kind of cat to read such a comic book. And only one man, that understands it, has such a kind of cat inside.♦ The comic book itself only has a short story in the same name. The story was read by many as a literature by itself. Besides the comic book, a collection of several short stories which had been published in different issues were also published. Champak ran this quarterly for 5 years and published in Bombay in the first, second and third issues and in Delhi in the fourth and the fifth. The success story of Champak would not be complete without the spin-offs. In 1989, the popular weekly Dasta Chandek was released, followed by Aam Aadmi, a magazine for the children aged 7-12, and Palda Nirmala for the curious. In 2000, the Marathi, Malayalam and English versions of Chandamama were amalgamated to make this Chandamama Chakkar Gaadi. This was followed by Manam in 2001, the first magazine to be published by Hazari Prathisthan. Its success saw two subsequent publications in Taravonay and Shabdachitra.
