"fraud," or "fraud in the inducement" or "fraud... in the execution" (1 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (5th ed. 2008) Actions, § 518, pp. 782-783; id. at § 519, p. 784), and whether there is an election of remedies that permits a party to proceed under one theory or another. Where, however, a cause of action is pleaded on alternative theories of recovery, the determination whether a party has elected to proceed on one or another theory will depend on which theory was chosen in the course of the litigation. Indeed, where alternative theories have been submitted to the jury or where a party has proceeded first with one theory and then another, the retrial of a case on remand is understood to require the presentation of evidence and arguments bearing only on the retrial of the theory of liability which was chosen on appeal. (See Smith v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transit Authority (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 1255, 1263, 84 Cal.Rptr.2d 642 (Smith); see also, generally, Wilkinson v. Rives (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 1370, 1376, 31 Cal. Rptr.2d 535 (Wilkinson).) [3] In using the term "repudiation," we do not mean to imply that there is a triable issue of fact as to whether the employer's repudiation of the employment agreement operated either as a termination of the employment relationship or as a "refusal to perform." Neither term is applicable where the operative facts are undisputed. (See Kinney v. Vaccari (1980) 107 Cal.App.3d 412, 418, 165 Cal.Rptr. 709.) a.
